Roads and Schools.

There is hardly a question before the country which has more angles to it than the good roads question. It bears upon the social, moral and intellectual welfare of the people quite as importantly as upon their economic condition, and nowhere is this more apparent than in the effect of good roads upon rural schools. President Kirk of the Kirksville Normal School has recently pointed to this fact. Where travel is difficult a rural school can serve only a small territory. It follows that there will be little money available to conduct the school, few pupils, few teachers and no hope for the future. In contrast to this, where there are good roads, rural schools can be consolidated and pupils brought to school by carriage even in the worst weather. The consolidated school can hire more than one teacher, so that teachers who are specialists will be available and the quality of instruction greatly improved. Experience has shown that where consolidated schools are established the interest of the community in education grows and financial support for the school becomes liberal. It is easy to see how such improvement in rural schools will bear upon the question of rural population and the output of the farms. But while one contemplates the beauties of the consolidated schools it must be remembered that good, hard roads leading to them are essential to their existence. - Republic.

The Signs of Spring

The signs of spring! The signs spring! it used to be a joyous thing to tootle with mellifluous glee about the blossom and the tree. The early robin looked so neat with chill blains on his little feet. The buds that braved the sudden gale and made the annual fruit crop fail, the balmy breeze that brought along the germs, a wild voracious through we hailed with warblings from the heart. But now we make an earlier start. The signs of spring are on display where shoppers seek the glad array of fluffs and feathers, fads and frills. Be brave, my lads, and pay the bills. Before the chickens in the coop begin to cackle and to whoop, before we have quit shoveling snow the signs of spring are on the go. They trip and toddle near and far. They joyride in a motor car whose shape and decorations fine proclaim it latest of its line. The signs that once dispelled our gloom of late like danger signals loom. Poor father views them with alarm and puts a mortgage on the farm. - Ex.

An Egg Drink.

The white of one egg, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar, half a pint of hot milk and a teaspoonful whipped cream make a delicious drink. Add the salt to egg white and beat until stiff; then add the sugar and the hot milk. Strain into a tumbler, and put a teaspoonful of whipped cream on top. - Colman's Rural World.

Rice Economy.

When you boil rice, do not throw away the water. Strain it into a bowl and you will find it makes good starch. This starch may be used either hot or cold. Two or three drops of turpentine are an improvement. - Ex.

What are the New Suits, Coats, Dresses for Women?

This is a big question, for there are so many new models and they are all so different!

While a few suits have Eton jackets, others have coats that are far removed from this jaunty mode.

The extreme long tunic, which extends just across the back, is the most decided note in skirts. However, the chic little tier effects have been interpreted in ways that may prove more fascinating to you.

At these moderate prices, we have had the garments custom-tailored and fashioned in these materials, which are foremost for Spring.

Satin Burba

Silk Poplin

The Value of Drugs Quality Versus Price

The value of drugs should be measured by their quality and not by their price. Good drugs are sometimes expensive. Cheap drugs are apt to be still more expensive, because poor drugs are worse than worthless—they are often harmful.

We sell only good drugs—the kind that are effective in curing sickness and disease. The quality of our drugs is of the highest, for we buy only the best that can be had.

Prices are always as low as good drugs can be sold for anywhere.

"Quality is the true test of cheapness"
